Nationwide protests reignited over US police killings

(BBC) Hundreds of demonstrators briefly shut down a meeting in San Francisco City Hall on Tuesday. Marchers in New York stopped traffic on the Brooklyn Bridge and there were scattered arrests in smaller cities. Meanwhile, a new dashcam video of an officer hitting an armed suspect with a vehicle in Arizona became public. Mario Valencia, 36, who was being pursued by police for multiple robberies and assaulting an officer, survived the collision. The protests across the US on Tuesday came after two cases of unarmed black men killed by law enforcement in a week. Walter Scott, a 50-year-old, was shot in the back and killed in South Carolina. Eric Harris, 44, was shot and killed when a 73-year-old reserve deputy said he accidentally drew his gun instead of a Taser.

Feds say National Guardsmen tried to sell guns, ammo to cartels

(CNN) Two active members of the U.S. Army National Guard were arrested in San Diego, California, on Wednesday for allegedly trying to sell guns, military ammunition and body armor to purported Mexican drug cartel members, law enforcement officials briefed on the Federal probe said. Jaime Casillas and Andrew Reyes allegedly were caught in a sting operation run by agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, according to an official briefed on the probe. Casillas was arrested during a traffic stop in El Cajon and Reyes was arrested at his La Mesa home, according to a Justice Department press release. Both men worked in the Army National Guard Armory in La Mesa, according to the release. The men made more than dozen sales of firearms, including AR-15 rifles, and stolen military ammunition, to confidential informants working with the ATF, the official said.

Mexico Oil Spill Affects Drinking Water for Tabasco City

(ABC) Mexico's Gulf coast state of Tabasco has set up an emergency plan to supply drinking water to the capital of Villahermosa after oil thieves punctured a pipeline, contaminating rivers that normally supply the city. The spill late last week sent workers with the state-owned oil company scrambling to limit damage, and four of Villahermosa's water treatment plants were shut down as a precaution. The Tabasco state government said Tuesday that it will temporarily supply water using 13 tanker trucks. Workers for the Pemex oil company set out containment booms and were trying to scoop oil off the waterways. Illegal pipeline taps have caused fires, explosions and spills in Mexico in the past. They became so frequent that Pemex no longer ships finished, usable fuels through pipelines.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

High pressure building over the west coast will bring dry weather and a warming trend to the interior through the weekend. The coast can expect mostly sunny skies until stratus and fog return late in the week.

Medford Weather:

A strong upper ridge is now building into the west coast. Flow aloft and from the north will weaken with time. The ridge will break to the east of the area Friday.

Reno Weather:

High pressure will bring warming temperatures, with well above normal temperatures starting Friday and lasting into next week. There will be a slight chance of afternoon and evening showers in the sierra over the weekend, with showers and possibly a few thunderstorms spreading into northeast California and western Nevada early next week.

San Francisco Weather:

A building ridge of high pressure will lead to warmer weather today and Friday. The marine layer is then expected to redevelop Friday night and over the weekend along with a cooling trend. In addition a long period swell will lead to hazardous beach conditions through Friday. For next week an upper level disturbance will bring the possibility of showers beginning about Tuesday.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

High pressure over the west coast for mainly fair skies and warmer than normal temperatures through the weekend. A weak low forms over the north state for a slight threat of mountain showers over the weekend and early next week.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure continues to build over the area with mainly dry conditions and temperatures returning to above average today and into the weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Gusty northeast will linger into the afternoon with the strongest winds in the Ventura and Los Angeles mountains. These offshore winds will bring above normal temperatures through Saturday. Onshore flow will return early next week with a marine layer and a cooling trend into midweek with temperatures back to normal by Monday. A Gulf of Alaska low will approach by midweek.

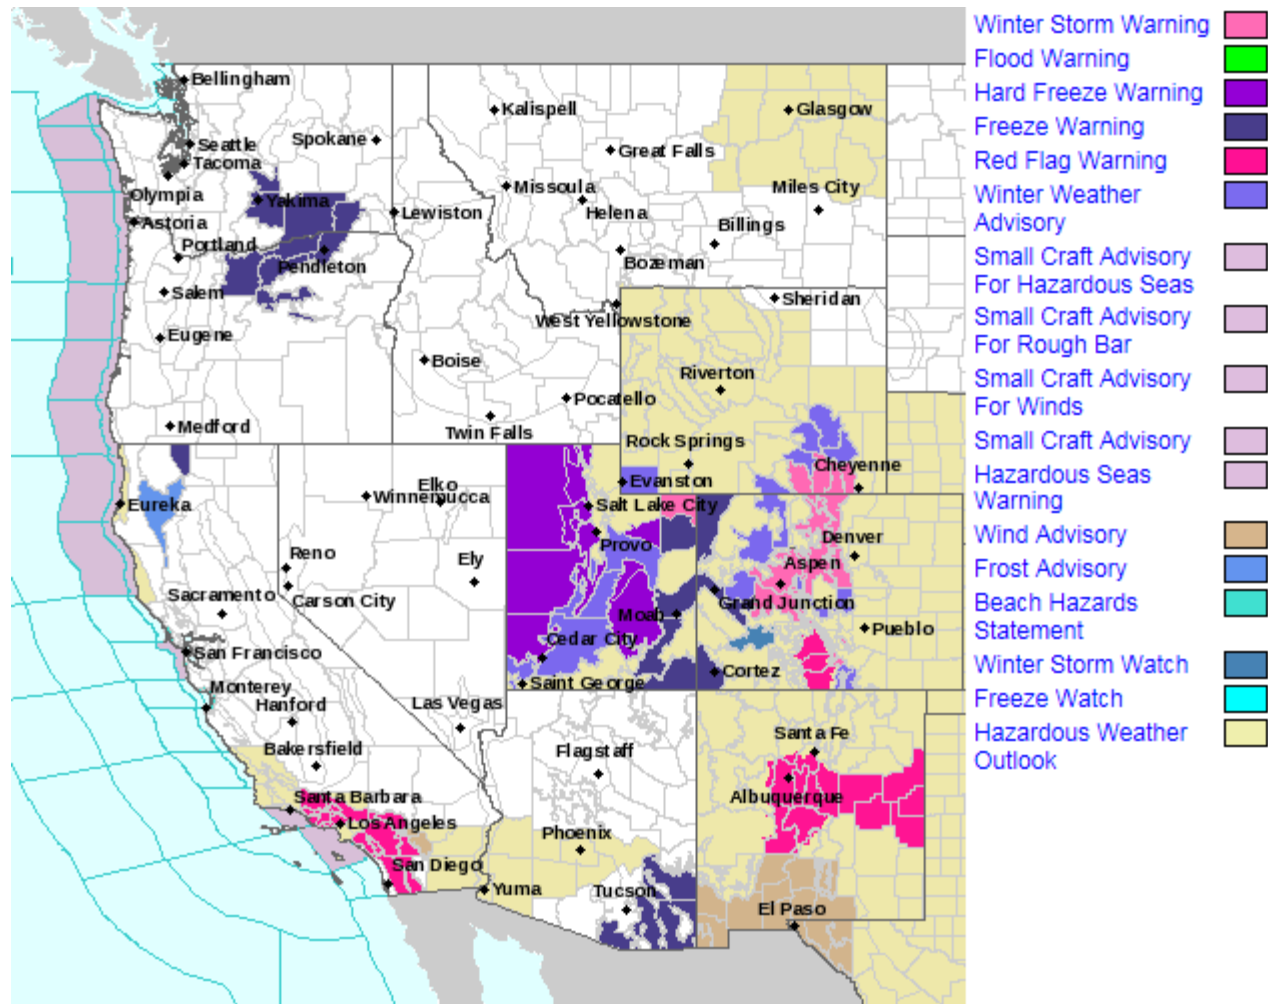

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Dry and warm offshore flow will continue today with strong and gusty northeast winds mainly in foothills this morning. Sunny and warm weather continues Friday but without the winds. Onshore flow will return this weekend with some coastal low clouds returning. Next week lower pressure over California will deepen our marine layer and could bring some showers by Wednesday.

Southeast California Weather:

Expect below normal high temperatures today as an upper low becomes centered near the four corners. It will be breezy as well though winds will not be as strong over southwest Arizona and southeast California as they were yesterday. A warming trend will start Friday with highs close to normal and then reaching back into the 90s on the lower deserts this weekend. Anticipate little change Monday. Anticipate somewhat cooler temperatures toward the middle of next week.
